(Written for the Roundabout.)
SCHOOL DAYS—FRIDAY.

She stood trim and beautiful before the window which was wide open. A new broom was in her hand, a bonnet of pink gingham covered her pretty, brown hair, and while waiting for the dust to settle, and the children to arrive, she had time to give the thought, which was uppermost in her heart, a most earnest heading. The most momentous questions confronted her. Should she answer in the affirmative or respond in the negative? The way out of a dull routine of life was opening very beautifully. She could have everything that wealth could buy; a home with every comfort; her father and mother made independent for life, and there would ever more be known the inconveniences of poverty, the "ifs" and "ands" of out-of-pocket fortune. It all depended upon herself—the burthen bearer in every phase of practical consideration, or effort, and now brought face to face with the no longer unknown quantity she breathed a prayer for courage, and took upon her heart sweet confidence. The words of Proctor flashed through her consciousness: "Mak no man your idol. For the best man must have faults, and his faults will usually become your's in addition to your own. This is true in art as it is in morals." Just here the children came trooping in and she very quickly brushed away dust from the desks, and rang the bell, setting aside all possible disturbances of mental disagreement until she was at liberty to talk the matter over which the author of the disturbance. In the meantime, something might intervene to cross the winter of her discontent.

There were three new pupils on this last day of the week. They had never been in school before. Had no books, and one of them, a girl, had such a pronounced case of giggles that the rest of the school were soon contaminated. But it soon wore away in the sympathy brought about by the pathetic crying of the other child for home and mamma.

Miss Green was truly thankful that she had had normal training, and had studied psychic tendencies. Both of these helps were of great assistance in ascertaining the cause for hysterics, and how to soothe nerves, which were ragged, jagged, and beyond control of the possessor, running away with even the natural common sense of the poor unfortunate.

"Come to recitation, children. Those of you who are not in the third reader may listen to me while I explain the story lesson." It was a chalk—black bird story as the children called it—but other birds and things were brought out in colors most entertaining. The new children sat entranced, and when the new house was finished, the mother and father bird began home-keeping, while the reading went on—there settled down within the circle a sensation of condition, calm, restful and quiet, enabling the teacher to take the reins of government in her own hands and conduct subsequent recitations with judicious exactness, justice and equity.

She was like a general on the field of battle. Each and every child represented the soldier ready for order or engagement, and the lessons were learned with surprising readiness. When the hour came for writing, one could have heard a pin drop, so generally assimilated was the power of control generated, actualized, in the definite self-reliance of a born leader made to teach children.

Instruction in the art of chirography means no small amount of patience. The common run of copy books are too classified, or two simple for much gratification either to the person teaching, or being taught, and in a neighborhood where the pedagogue had to buy out of her slender salary, brooms, dippers, water bucket, stove pipe, chalk, and even the fuel or often times go without fire—it was simply a question of economy to set copy, and arrange the formula of height in the letters, position of the scribe, and all the hundred and one exigencies of the situation. One boy would insist upon holding his head to one side, thrusting his tongue out of his mouth, and stabbing the pen point into the paper nine times out of every tenth effort.

The teacher strapped him into harness made for the purpose, and put glasses on him. John Isham wrote a more masterful hand than any boy who was graduated under the tutelage of Miss Green, and he told me not long ago "that the home-made harness helped out lots."

Recess was always pleasant on a Friday. A picnic feeling pervaded the air. The baskets and buckets were emptied and their contents set upon a long bench covered with a white cloth, and every one enjoyed the pleasure of "dining out, while eating each other's food, prepared expressly for this occasion. Singing, too, came in for a part of the service, and the organization of social, as well as table etiquette, was permanent in its every effect, never to be forgotten in subsequent life, and a memory in the heart as lasting as are the scenes of beauty photographed with the camera of love.

Arithmetic came up after noon recess—a review. It was essentially practical. The measuring of floors and windows. The height and breadth of the children, the length of dresses and the expenditure of funds in an every day purchase of commodities required for food and clothing. After arithmetic, drawing lessons (on the board) in geography, were made interesting, and the regular spelling lessons, where, in every child had a share of words, with inducements for going ahead. There was no afternoon recess. When the spelling lesson was over, the weekly roll call was made. Merits or demerits accredited upon a register, and when the desks were put in order, the bonnets, hats and baskets, in the hands of their owners. Books and papers in satchels. All heads were lowered while a whispered benediction was given and the children filed out into the evening shadows, light-hearted and happy, but with a softened touch of something strangely calm. The week of labor was ended. Had one thing happened to impress its identity upon the soul? Had the teacher acted upon the intellectual entity, only; or was the three-fold-cord stronger and more enduring than before?

Miss Green arranged her own desk, and then, after mature deliberation, lay her head upon the table with a weary heart, but not break. The storm and tempest now over, blue sky was seen in the gloaming, a great peace possessed her being, and in the spirit of a little child she, too, passed out into the evening, content to go forward always in the discharge of duty.

ANNUAL CONFERENCE FOR EDUCATION IN THE SOUTH.

We desire to call the special attention of all interested in popular education, to the above meeting, which will be held at Lexington Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, May 2, 3 and 4.

Who are invited to attend the sessions of this Conference? In the language of its President, the Hon. Robert C. Ogden, of New York City, "all who sympathize with its general aims are cordially welcome."

What is the general aim of the Conference? "Its purpose is to spread the gospel of education for all the people." Its aims, therefore, being popular rather than professional.

The topics presented and discussed have a common interest for educators of every rank, as well as for all intelligent and patriotic citizens.

Who will be present? First, it is expected that President Ogden will bring on his special train, as usual, some hundred or more friends—men like Hon. Seth Low, Dr. Lyman Abbott, Dr. Albert Shaw, and others. It is thought that some several governors and ex-governors of the South will be present. The presidents of all the colleges and universities of the South, State superintendents, professors, teachers, citizens by the hundreds and thousands.

The sessions will be held at the Auditorium, in Woodland Park.

On Wednesday the members will be treated to an old-fashioned Kentucky burgoo and barbecue. This is the opportunity of a lifetime for attending a great meeting. Let Frankfort and Franklin county teachers and citizens show their appreciation of these worthy visitors by greeting them in large numbers.

VALIDITY OF INSURANCE CONTRACT IS ATTACKED.

The legality of the Consultation or Advisory Board contracts or other forms of special contracts of life insurance outside of the regular insurance policy will be tested at the trial of Mr. Kennett in the suit of the Western National Bank of Louisville against L. W. Kennett, of this city.

The Western National Bank of Louisville brought suit against Mr. Kennett the first part of the week to recover on a $245.30 sixty-day note which was alleged to have been given by Mr. Kennett to Boyd Mitchusson, of Louisville, which was transferred to W. C. Trabue of Louisville, and later to the bank.

MR. KENNETT'S ANSWER.
Lawyer for Mr. Kennett, which was filed yesterday, stated that the note does not belong to the bank, but to the Commonwealth Life Insurance Company, of Louisville. He further alleges that the note was given to the Commonwealth Life Insurance Company for payment of the premiums on policies No. 130 and No. 131, which were issued to him by the company.

Mr. Kennett further alleges that last fall Mr. Mitchusson, the Lexington agent for the Commonwealth Life Insurance Company, called on him and explained the terms of the policies issued by that company. He says that he was induced to take the policies by the assurance of the agent that he would become a member of the Board of Consultation, which was limited to five members.

SPECIAL REMUNERATION.

He asserts that, as remuneration paid by the company for the services as a member of this board, a certain sum of money was to be set aside by the company to be taken from each of the five members written and in force, and that the money set aside would be used by the company in the reduction of the premiums on the policies. With such inducements offered, Mr. Kennett signed his note with two $5,000 policies in the company and became a member of the Board of Consultation, believing at the time that the action of the company was valid.

Mr. Kennett says that after mature consideration of the terms under which he took out the policies and was assisted by the company in the payment of the premiums he sought legal advice and was told that the contracts were not valid because they were an indirect rebate which is prohibited by the laws of Kentucky. He was also advised not to pay the note when it matured.

Mr. Kennett says that the note was given to Mr. Mitchusson, who is the property of the Commonwealth Life Insurance Company, and never has been the property of the Western National Bank, of Louisville, and prays the court to dismiss the suit.

Attorney A. P. Gourneau, who has acted as the legal adviser of Mr. Kennett said last night, when seen by a reporter for the Herald, that the Supreme Court of Michigan, based on the advice of his board contracts, or other forms of special insurance outside of the regular insurance policy, is illegal and that the State Superintendents of Insurance of Missouri and Illinois have prohibited the sale of such contracts. — Lexington Herald.

PRISONER ESCAPES BUT IS RECAPTURED.

Thos. Mulligan, a noted prisoner in the local penitentiary, made his escape from the prison on Friday morning by working his way into the storage room of the shop factory (which extends beyond the walls) and cutting his way under the floor with a hatchet and thus digging out. He was recaptured later in the day by Mr. T. E. Dailey, who lives near Bloomington, and the two started back to town in a buggy, being met by Warden Lillard and a guard on the road.

Mulligan was then handcuffed and left in the buggy with Dailey. When nearly to town the man jumped from the buggy and hid under a wagon in the darkness. A lantern was procured and the man found and brought back to his old quarters. He is a life-times for murdering a man in Covington, and was in the attempted outbreak about two years ago when, with some twenty others, they captured a guard and barricaded themselves in the shop and kept the guards at bay for nearly a whole day. He is a desperate man and is far gone in consumption.

Itching hemorrhoids were the plague of my life. Was almost wholly and permanently after doctors had failed. — C. F. Cornell, Valley Street, Saugerties, N. Y.

At breakfast time, on Friday, he came to the office of the hotel, paid his bill and ordered breakfast, but when it came he was too ill to eat. He then went to the office, where he became worse and finally started to his room in the ell of the hotel. He threw himself on the bed and was vomiting freely when Dr. C. A. Fish was summoned and commenced working with him (having found out from the man's admissions) that he had taken morphine.

A stomach pump was used and after that stimulants to produce a reaction, but without avail, and the man died on Friday afternoon.

His family, who live in Brooklyn, N. Y., were notified and the remains shipped there by their order.

OUR DRUGGIST TELLS US.

We learn to-day that our local druggists have made special arrangements which carries with it an agreement to keep in stock a full line of special prescriptions created at the Laboratories of Dr. Shoop.

A novel, yet thoroughly practical and newly-created article has just been introduced by the Laboratories in question, called Lax-ets, and is included as a part of the arrangement made to-day by the druggist in question. We refer to a prescription put up in candy tablet form, for the relief of constipation, some compound, bad breath, slow complexion, biliousness, headache, etc., etc. The novelty of Lax-ets arises from two or three sources.

It has not even the suspicion, so far as taste is concerned, that it is a medicine. It is candy in taste, and in appearance. Again, Lax-ets are put up in beautifully lithographed metal boxes, and retain for the remarkably low price of 5 cents per box.

On the box are printed the ingredients, consisting of Cascara Sagrada, Egyptian Senna, Solid Extract of French Prunes, Slippery Elm Bark, and other highly meritorious ingredients for the conditions mentioned above.

A Candy Cold Cure put up in the same style also sells at 5 cents per box and is called "Dr. Shoop's Preventives."

Patrons, we believe, will be glad to learn of the new arrangement, and particularly of the new remedies, which certainly seem worthy of a trial purchase involving only the cost of a nickel.

FRANKFORT FEELS PROUD.

We take the following clipping from the Danville Advocate, of April 16. Mr. Joseph Bailey Brown, one of the winners of the gold medal for oratory, is a nephew of Mrs. W. F. Barret, Mrs. W. T. Scott and Mrs. Joseph Bailey (for whose husband he was named). He is a brilliant and capable young man, and is a graduate of the Frankfort High School. His father, Mr. Knox Brown, and his mother, were both born and reared in this city, though now living in Owen county.

CENTRAL WINS.

The Danville College was first in the race for debating honors last Friday evening in the inter-collegiate contest with State College at Lexington. The contest was well attended and the Central representatives warned to their sub-jects.

This is the first contest in the inter-collegiate association this season. The debate was on the question, "Resolved, That the Interstate Transportation Rates should be regulated by the National Legislature," Central taking the affirmative and State the negative. The judges were: Judge Watts Parker, Matt Walton, President W. G. Frost, of Berea; President J. L. Weber, of Kentucky Wesleyan, and Judge James P. Tarvin, of Covington. The vote was very close, Central winning three to two. The contestants were: Joseph Bailey Brown (son of Mr. Knox Brown), C. Cheek and G. V. Triplett for Central University, and A. M. Kirby, W. S. Hamilton and W. J. Baxter, for State College.—Danville Advocate.

A Wonderful Record.

As made up by improved and exact process, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is a most efficient remedy for rectifying all the womanly functions, correcting displacements, prolapsus, anteversion of uterus, uterine fibroids, pernicious periods, toning up the nerves and bringing about a perfect state of health. It cures the backache, periodical headaches, the neuralgia, the rheumatism of the region, the pain and tenderness over lower abdominal region, dries up the pelvic catarrhal drabs, so disagreeable and so weakening, and cures every form of weakness incident to the organs distinctly feminine.

"Favorite Prescription" is the only medicine for women, the makers of which are not afraid to print their formula on the bottle wrapper, thus taking the mystery out of the prescription. It is the only medicine for women, every ingredient of which has the strongest possible endorsement of the most eminent medical practitioners and writers of our day, recommending it for the diseases for which "Favorite Prescription" is used. It can only put up medicine for women, sold through druggists, which does not contain a large percentage of alcohol, so harmful to the body, especially to delicate women. It has more genuine cures to its credit than all other medicines for women, combined, having saved thousands of mothers from the operating table and the surgeon's knife. It has restored delicate, weak women to strong health, and made motherhood making motherhood possible, where there was barrenness before, thereby brightening and making happy many thousands of homes by its use. It will strengthen the marital bonds and add sunshine where gloom and despondency had reigned before.

Write to Dr. R. V. Pierce. He will send you good, fatherly, professional advice, in a plain, sealed envelope, absolutely free.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets do not grip. They effectually cleanse the system of accumulated impurities.

The "Medical Record," a Medical Adviser, by Dr. Pierce, 1008 pages, is sent free on receipt of stamps to pay expense of mailing only. Send 21 one-cent stamps for the book in paper covers, 31 stamps for the cloth-bound volume. Address as above.

BURGLARY AT FARMDALE.

A white man entered the home of Mr. Wallace Estill (who owns the old Tom Farmer place, opposite the Stewart Home), six miles from the city, on Friday night, but was run off without obtaining any booty.

The burglar was very cool about it and carried a lamp part of the time.

Mr. Estill thought at first, when he heard the man moving about in an upper room, that it was his son. Upon finding that he was discovered, the burglar blew out the lamp and dodged about so that Mr. Estill could not shoot at him until he got out of the house.

Mr. Estill then fired two shots, but does not think he hit the man. He obtained entrance through a back door that Mr. Estill had left unfastened for his son to come in.

Dr. Shoop has created at his Laboratories a superior, sweet, toothsome candy tablet named Lax-ets. The ingredients are printed on every tablet. Photographed men houses in which these tablets are sold. Lax-ets sell at the very low price of 5 cents per box. A better, safer or more certain laxative than Lax-ets is, Dr. Shoop believes, absolutely impossible. It is a specific for Constipation, Sour Stomach, Bad Breath, Sallow Complexion, Lilliness, Headache, Dizziness, etc., etc. Sold by all dealers.

Chapter II.

Mother-love, the only untiring and invincible motor in the mind world, untiring, because it ends only with the mother's life; invincible, because though scarce on every point of its surface and shocked, or even crushed to its center by indifference, neglect, or even open abuse—mother-love serves the offender with gentle, glowing, tender enthusiasm until "Our Father" says it is "enough, come up higher."

Such mother-love was patiently watching and nursing the darling daughter, Una, back to an unexpected and now unattractive future. Thus attended we leave Una and go back to Mrs. Dare's, where David is hastily preparing to board the railroad train, which is now nearly due. In order to reach the station in time, David calls to a traveler, who is driving along the public road and asks to be taken to the station. He is scarcely seated in the vehicle, when he discovers that the man, with whom he is riding, is not guiding the horse, and from the strange glare in his eyes, David infers that he is in the power of a maniac. Their vehicle is very near the railroad track, the train has whistled, and though it can not be seen, because of a curve in the road, it is so near that in another instant it will be upon them unless the horse is turned aside. David tries to take the reins, but with an unearthly shriek the madman leaps to the track with the reins in his hands, and, strange to say, when the engine struck the vehicle, its owner and the horse being instantly killed, David was thrown into a ditch beside the track, whence he was conveyed in an unconscious condition back to his mother's home.

Upon examination it was found, by the physician, Dr. Palliate, that he had sustained injuries which would necessitate his remaining quiet for days, perhaps weeks. When David awoke to consciousness, looking about the room, seeing his mother, he said, "Mother, I have had a fearful dream. What time is it? I would not have that train leave me, for the world." At the same time he awoke to rise.

Alas 'twas not a dream, but a terrible reality, which he soon recognized, and in his helplessness asked: "Mother, will not Una come to me? Of course you wrote to her of my accident."

"Yes, David, I wrote to her and addressed the letter to Elmville, where her parents reside. David, you remember you did not tell me where you left Una, and you burned the letter telling us of her illness, so I wrote to Mr. Heart's business manager, Mr. Tellnot, and asked that my letter be forwarded to Mr. Heart. You know, too, that there are often delays in our mail." His mother dared not to tell him, in his weak condition, how many days he had been insensible.

"Then I know Una will come as soon as she learns of my collision with that—engine," said David, and to his mother's much-needed relief he again fell asleep. She dreaded the time when she should be obliged to tell David that her letter to Mr. Tellnot had been returned to her with a note, saying that no letters should be sent to him except those of a purely business character, and that no individual, under any circumstances, should be given his address, an assumed one, known only to Mr. Tellnot. Who can appreciate David's mother's situation? Was there not a two-edged knife destroying her vitality?

Reader, if you have a living mother, beware how you handle the knives that are in your keeping.

Hoping David will sleep until much improved, we leave him and witness Mr. and Mrs. Heart's agony when they found Una insensible, deserted by her husband, and nothing to explain a single circumstance.

"They may not weep—they can not sigh, A weight is pressing on their breasts;

A breath breathes on them witheringly, Their tears are dry, their sighs suppressed!"

From intimations in the foregoing, the reader will infer that Mr. Heart, Una's father, acts promptly. Receiving no reply to his letter, which he had rightly supposed would reach David late at his mother's, he at once decided to leave Altona as soon as Una should be able to travel, and if possible cut off all communication with his family's former associates for the remainder of the time allotted for their tour.

Una's father, having received no reply to his letter, deemed David Dare's conduct an unpardonable insult to himself, as well as an outrage not to be forgiven by his daughter, and at once decided to leave Altona as soon as Una should be able to travel.

"We will not subject our daughter to the tender mercies of scandal-mongers, and we will continue our summer drive through the country, as far as possible from all telegraph and mail facilities. I believe Una's good sense, with the constant change of scene, will restore her health and fortify her against any efforts made by David Dare, should he attempt to offer any explanation for his inhuman conduct."

It will be remembered by our readers, that the last conversation between David and Una occurred after the rising bell had rung, and before breakfast. When they did not appear, as usual, at the breakfast table, a servant was sent to their room to ask if they would have breakfast in their room. No response being made to his knock, after repeated knocking, the servant returned to the dining hall and said he "could not make any head."

As if by intuition of impending evil Mr. and Mrs. Heart at once arose and hastened to the bridal chamber, where they found Una as aforesaid.

There being no one in the house who could give any account of David Dare, and there being no indication of personal violence, the physician gave his opinion as aforesaid. Thinking David had gone out into the village, a messenger was sent to find him, if possible, and tell him of Una's illness.

The messenger returned saying, "A person who was well acquainted with Mr. David Dare had driven up to the 'ivery stable,' while he was asking if Mr. Dare had been at the stable, and said he had passed Mr. David Dare at least five miles from the village, in a road cart with another gentleman. They were driving a very fast horse, and doubtless he was so far by this time that the quickest way to overtake him would be to wait until the railroad train came along and send message by that."

Acting upon this information, Mr. Heart had the letter, before referred to, sent to Walnut Hill, which David received so promptly, but, as we know, was not answered, and Mr. Heart accordingly instructed his agent, Mr. Tellnot, as aforesaid.

Days of suspense and parental solicitude are at last rewarded, the crisis in her condition being safely passed. Reader, shall I tell you what Una is like?

"There is a ray of love in her bright eye, That with its magic wins the soul it warms, There is a smile of beauty on her lips, That soft beguiling beckons to a banquet, But there's a mild serenity of virtue, That in this sunny paradise prevails, Hallow each charm, and awes profane approach."

Una's parents avoided reference to the cause of her illness until she voluntarily gave them as nearly as she could remember the conversation which she and David had, just before he left her; adding that she knew David only meant to tease her a little by what he said as he left the room—and knowing that David's mother lived near Walnut Hill, Una said he was "no doubt waiting there for them."

"My dear daughter," said her father, "I trust your version of David's conduct is true and if true, he was too uncivil, to say the least of him, not to be reproved, and I think the mildest and most effectual way to administer what he deserves, is to continue our tour in another direction, not letting David know our whereabouts—and by the time he finds us he will 'see himself as others see him."

"Father, whatever you say shall be my law while I am with you." I am ready to leave this place at any time. The view from my window saddens me. Whenever I look out there I seem to see David get into that road cart and ride so quickly out of sight."

Accordingly, our little party of three, Mr. and Mrs. Heart and Una Dare set out in a beautiful new surrey which Mr. Heart had ordered from Messrs. Publish, Advertiser & Co., Carriage Manufacturers, who thought it would be a nice little advertisement for them to have mentioned in the personal column of the city paper, "that the wealthy Mr. Heart, of Elmville, had ordered one of their handsome, new-style surreys, to be sent to Altona, whence he proposed to drive himself and family through the 'blue-grass' region of Kentucky. Mr. Heart's surrey is now on exhibition in our factory, but will be delivered to him next Tuesday. Parties wanting a surrey would do well to see this before it is shipped."

As if by intuition of impending evil Mr. and Mrs. Heart at once arose and hastened to the bridal chamber, where they found Una as aforesaid.

There being no one in the house who could give any account of David Dare, and there being no indication of personal violence, the physician gave his opinion as aforesaid. Thinking David had gone out into the village, a messenger was sent to find him, if possible, and tell him of Una's illness.
